ICE CREAM SCANDAL!

Many kinds of vanilla ice cream contain absolutely no trace of vanilla!

A new investigation has discovered that some kinds of vanilla ice cream contain no cream or fresh milk either.

Vanilla ice cream should be made from fresh milk, cream, sugar, egg yolks and vanilla. According to the research by Which?, one in five vanilla ice creams do not contain vanilla, cream or fresh milk. Pretty shocking news!

The research found that in many of these ice creams, alternative ingredients were being used to make the product cheaper. Vanilla is the second most expensive spice in the world, because it takes a lot of time and effort to grow the vanilla flowers and to dry the bean pods, which give us the flavour.

Most of the world's vanilla is grown in Madagascar, an island off the east coast of Africa. Vanilla is currently more expensive than silver.

What do you think? Is it fair to call a product 'vanilla ice cream' if it doesn't contain any vanilla or any cream?
