BIG NEWS

ICE CREAM SCANDAL!

A NEW investigation has discovered that several brands of vanilla ice cream contain absolutely no traces of vanilla.

The investigation has also found that some supermarket and branded vanilla ice creams contain no cream or fresh milk either. Insert shock-faced emoji here!

According to Which?, who conducted the research, one in five vanilla ice creams contained neither vanilla, cream or fresh milk. That's pretty shocking considering traditional vanilla ice cream is made from fresh milk, cream, sugar, egg yolks and vanilla.

The research found that in many of these ice creams, general flavouring was used instead of real vanilla. The Which? investigation found that cheaper alternatives were being used in place of traditional ingredients.
